

Good Foundations Academy Parent Handbook Acknowledgement

All quality students are capable of learning to accept responsibility for their own education and behavior by arriving on time, turning in homework and classwork on time, being prepared with class supplies, etc, and taking responsibility for their actions. The philosophy and practices GFA incorporates acknowledge that young people are free to act and are therefore moral “agents” accountable for their actions.

Our policies will encourage discipline, hard work, cooperation, decision making, and acceptance of the consequences for decisions made. Such policies, and a clear understanding of academic expectations, help our students to choose their quest for intellectual and personal growth. The students’ sense of alignment between their personal educational goals and these of their school further reinforce their desire to accept responsibility for their education.
